

Title: Sailing Experience in French Polynesia - A Story of Shipwreck and Reunion

Location: French Polynesia, specifically the Tuamotu Islands

Sailing Condition: Shipwreck due to a line getting caught around the propeller, leading to the boat being stranded on a reef

Problems: Shipwreck, aftermath of the disaster

Fixes: Unable to salvage the boat after the shipwreck

Anchorage: The atoll of Arutua where the shipwreck occurred

Marinas: No specific marinas mentioned, living off the land with the help of a local named Herve

Rules: No specific rules mentioned

Safety Measures: Emphasizing the unpredictable nature of the sailing life and the importance of being prepared for emergencies

Routes: Sailing route through French Polynesia, particularly the Tuamotu Islands

Sea Bottom: Reef where the shipwreck occurred

Weather: Not specified in the provided information

Tide: Not specified in the provided information

Currents: Not specified in the provided information

Note: The focus of the provided information is more on the personal experience of shipwreck and reunion rather than technical sailing details.