

1. Route: The sailing journey covered 25,000 miles over 6 years, from Tonga to New Zealand. The crew encountered varied sailing conditions, including running from Cyclone M and facing calms due to lack of wind.

2. Navigation & Maneuvering: The boat, SV Parlay, faced challenges due to an injector pump failure, leaving only one engine functional. This made maneuvering difficult, especially during customs clearance at Opuia Marina. The crew had to carefully navigate with one engine to dock the catamaran.

3. Crew & Celebrations: The crew consisted of Colin, Tony, Elliot, Wally, and Chris, each with a unique connection to the journey. The crew engaged in competitive activities like a scavenger hunt and murder mystery game to pass time. Upon arrival in New Zealand, they were greeted by friends and family, including a traditional Maori Haka performance.

4. Clearing into New Zealand: Customs and immigration clearance at Opuia Marina was a smooth process, with minimal items confiscated. The crew obtained a temporary import permit and made necessary arrangements for repairs in Fun Day to ensure both engines were operational for their homecoming celebration in Auckland.

5. Homecoming & Local Support: The crew received a warm welcome from friends and family upon their arrival in New Zealand. Local marina manager Blair and family friend Ian played significant roles in welcoming them back home. The crew also engaged in celebratory activities, including enjoying local cuisine and experiencing traditional cultural performances.

6. Challenges & Repairs: The crew faced challenges with a faulty injector pump, requiring repairs in Fun Day to restore the functionality of the second engine. There was uncertainty regarding the timeline for repair completion before the scheduled homecoming celebration in Auckland.

7. Emotional Journey: The journey held deep personal significance for Colin, reflecting on the hardships and triumphs experienced over the 6-year sailing adventure. The crew's emotional connection to the completion of the journey and return to New Zealand was evident throughout their experiences and interactions.

8. Future Plans: Despite immediate repair concerns, the crew looked forward to the upcoming homecoming celebration in Auckland, where they anticipated a large turnout of supporters and well-wishers to mark the completion of their long and challenging sailing voyage.
